Unveiling the Creative Process: From Inspiration to Execution

Roberto Finelli's creative process is a fascinating blend of imagination, research, and experimentation. His inspiration often stems from everyday observations, chance encounters, and the absurdities of modern life. Once an idea takes hold, Finelli embarks on a journey of research, gathering references and delving into the subject matter to ensure authenticity and depth in his work.

The execution of Finelli's paintings involves a meticulous layering of acrylic paints, creating a vibrant and textured visual language. He masterfully employs a palette of muted tones and vibrant hues, evoking a sense of both nostalgia and otherworldliness. Beyond surrealism, Finelli finds inspiration in the works of Hieronymus Bosch, whose fantastical and allegorical paintings depict the human condition with a haunting and often grotesque intensity. Finelli's fascination with the interplay of light and shadow, as seen in Caravaggio's chiaroscuro technique, also manifests in his own paintings, creating a sense of dramatic tension and heightened emotion.

Beyond the realm of traditional art, Finelli is influenced by contemporary pop culture, incorporating references to music, cinema, and the absurdities of everyday life into his work. His sculptures often feature recognizable objects imbued with new meanings, blurring the lines between the familiar and the uncanny.
