The Princes in the Tower is one of the most enduring mysteries of English history. In 1483, Edward V, aged 12, and his younger brother, Richard, Duke of York, aged 9, were placed in the Tower of London by their uncle, Richard, Duke of Gloucester. They were never seen again.
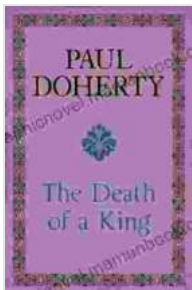

There are many theories about what happened to the princes. Some believe that they were murdered by Richard, who wanted to become king himself. Others believe that they were killed by someone else, such as the Duke of Buckingham or the Earl of Rivers. Still others believe that they escaped from the Tower and lived in hiding.

There is no definitive evidence to support any of these theories. However, there are some clues that may help us to understand what happened to the princes.

- The princes were seen alive in the Tower on 13 June 1483.

- After that date, there is no record of them ever being seen again.

- Richard, Duke of Gloucester, became king on 6 July 1483.

- In 1485, two boys claiming to be the princes appeared in Flanders.

- The boys were eventually executed by Henry VII.

These clues suggest that the princes were killed sometime after 13 June 1483. However, they do not tell us who killed them or why.

The mystery of the Princes in the Tower has never been solved. However, it continues to fascinate people to this day. It is a story of power, ambition, and tragedy. It is a story that reminds us of the dark side of human nature.
